

Appoint a Data Protection Officer.
It's mandatory.

All businesses, big or small, need a Data Protection Officer* (DPO).

Someone who can develop and implement good policies and practices for handling personal data that meet your organisation's needs. Someone who can communicate the policies and practices clearly to employees and customers. And someone who can manage personal data-related queries or complaints.

Appoint one today.

*A DPO's responsibilities can be taken on exclusively by one person, distributed to one or more employees in addition to their current role or outsourced to a third-party.

