

PROTECT YOUR

From 1 September 2019, companies can only ask for your NRIC number* if required by the law or if necessary to prove your identity.

WHAT SHOULD YOU DO?

01 ASK

Is your NRIC number required by law, or is it necessary to prove your identity?

*Psst!
You may simply show your NRIC if a company just needs to check your identity.*

02 CHOOSE ALTERNATIVES

Unless required by law or necessary to prove your identity, check if the company accepts other personal data instead, e.g. mobile number or partial NRIC number (e.g. XXXX567A).

03 SAFEGUARD

Unless required by law, don't let companies keep your NRIC (even if it's temporary).

*Treatment applies to Foreign Identification Number (FIN), Work Permit number and Birth Certificate number, as well as identification documents containing these numbers.

Joining an organisation as a new employee

Checking into a hotel

Seeking treatment at a medical clinic

Subscribing to a mobile phone line

Enrolling into a private education institution

TO GIVE — OR — NOT TO GIVE?

Here are some examples of when, and when not, to give your NRIC number.

Redemption of free parking

Signing up for retail membership

Submitting feedback or registering interest in a product or service

Online purchase of movie tickets

Participating in a lucky draw