

Dear Sirs,

I would like to highlight that allowing personal data owners having the rights to correct their personal data stored in those organizations, which have previously obtained their personal data, will increase business cost substantially.

This means that individuals can request an organization to alter their personal data stored in the organization's systems (and to prove that the changes have been made).

Please consider carefully the impact on business cost.

Yours faithfully,
Chiok Meng